Maintenance silver-plated dish

Cover the bottom of the tray with aluminium foil. Make sure the bottom is fully covered. Now pour warm water into the tray. Use enough water for the cutlery or other silver items to be fully submerged. Add baking powder to the warm water and wait for the reaction to subside. Now put the cutlery in the tray. Make sure that it is fully submerged and that it touches the aluminium foil (very important!). Wait five to ten minutes before removing the cutlery from the tray. Don't use your bare hands, as the cutlery may be very warm. Lay it out on a piece of kitchen towel and wipe dry properly. Don't be afraid to use some force. The surface of your cutlery is full of small holes, and these will more or less be filled again if you use some force. Your silver cutlery will be nice and shiny again. Instead of baking powder, you can also use washing soda, which is more effective. The baking powder allows the reaction to continue quicker and acts as a catalyst.

Maintenance - low side table

The table can be cleaned with a soft, dry (micro-fibre) cloth.
