aBt!007 - Earthenware Jar Tables

Earthenware jars - approx. early 1900

The earthenware jars had an opening at the top which was usually sealed with a cork or stopper. They were used to store oil, wine or other liquids. Jars were often glazed in order to prevent their contents from evaporating. These particular jars come from Belgium. Despite the marks on the bottom of the jar, we have been unable to trace its exact origins.

Maintenance - earthenware jars

The jars can be cleaned with a dry cloth.

Maintenance - tables

The tables can be cleaned with a dry cloth. The tables are covered in a polish that makes it possible to remove stains using a slightly moist cloth.
